DANGER OF A BAD NAME

ONE prevalent and persistent misconception about Hongkong and its overseas trade needs scotching: it arose again during the Kearns talks with local garment makers, not for the first time, and perhaps not for the last. Many people believe that Hongkong, because of its refugee problem and the widespread poverty here, should be given preferential treatment in trade. But no one has been able to explain why.

Hongkong is not the only poor territory which is trying to expand exports. There are many others, some with far poorer resources and facilities than ours. And how anyone can argue that acceptance by America of a flood of Hongkong-made garments in any way helps to ease hardship and poverty here, is beyond us. Surely the chief beneficiaries in that case are the garment manufacturers themselves and their shareholders. If we could boost about pay and employment conditions in our factories generally, the plea that our workers also benefit might have a real and substantial basis.

FOR there is no doubt that the garment export boom has led to a terrific growth of the industry. And it is assumed that its expansion was prompted not by hope of charity in the American market but in response to genuine demand. America is under no obligation to take more than she absorbs without jeopardizing her own industry. This is a point Mr Kearns made last week.

We may disagree with the effect of our exports but the decision to curb imports is one for America alone to make. And it is unhealthy to believe that any country with which we trade must do so with the idea of helping us. Surely the strength of our industry can only be tested by the fair demand for our products.

MANY of the complaints which were heard during Mr Kearns visit came from manufacturers opposed to the "past performance" method of fixing quotas. They include some not exporting to the United States at all. Their concern is for the future in case they should want to enter the American market later. But it should be clear that America is not going to allow unrestricted imports to continue. And our only hope is that this second visit of Mr Kearns succeeds, where the first failed, in impressing on industry the lesson of diversification.

The decision of the breakaway group of the Garment Manufacturers Union to limit exports, was unavoidable. It is difficult to feel much sympathy for the newcomers who in spite of warnings of restrictions, have crashed into the American market and precipitated action by Washington. Representing perhaps 80 per cent of the Hongkong exporters of garments to the U.S., the breakaway group seems likely to be able to devise a mutually satisfactory undertaking. We feel this is necessary because there is a real danger that if complaints about the volume of our exports continue, Hongkong will end up with a bad name—just as Japan had in many countries before the war.

INITIAL REFUGEE YEAR GRANT: HONGKONG'S REACTION COLONY'S THANKS TO BRITAIN

Dr Stumpf Says:
"Disappointingly Small Donation"

By A CHINA MAIL REPORTER

Hongkong residents concerned with the World Refugee Year fund drive today said "thank-you" to the United Kingdom for its initial grant of £129,000—or more than HK$2 million.

But a Church leader in Hongkong said this morning that the grant was "disappointingly small."

CANADA MAY

GIVE

CHINA MAIL REPORTER

A Canadian World Refugee Year committee is expected to send a grant of not less than HK$300,000 to aid Hongkong's refugees. It was learned this morning.

Miss Madge Newcombe of the Council of Social Service said that through personal contacts and correspondence, she had been able to bring the Colony's refugee problem closer to the Canadians.

The response from the Social Planning Council of the Toronto Committee for the World Refugee Year, amounted to a promise of a grant of not less than C$50,000.

Miss Newcombe said that full details of the grant are not yet available.

Very Useful

But there is still a few months more, and I hope that another grant will be forthcoming during this time, he said.

However, he said, the grant is very useful and can be put to many good uses, such as the Governor, Sir Robert Black, outlined in his speech yesterday.

Summing up his reaction he said, "I feel disappointed that a grant has been made; and hopeful that a further grant is forthcoming."

Hilton Cheong-leen, Urban Councillor said that news of the grant was certainly welcome.

"With this HK$2,064,000 we should be able to build at least another large community centre, a resettlement estate or another secondary or trade school."

"The United Kingdom World Refugee Year Committee serves the highest praise for its efforts on behalf of our refugees," he said.

It is also a timely reminder that we in Hongkong should not be left behind in supporting our own World Refugee Year fund, he added.

Overcrowding

Commenting on the Governor's speech, he said on the question of Chinese refugees being kept on staying in the Colony. "Not all of them are keen on staying here in Hongkong because of the overcrowding."

"If more countries were willing to take some of our refugees, and many are keen to settle abroad, it would be a welcome step in helping us solve the problem of overcrowding."

"Chinese refugees in Hongkong," he said, "have a strong cultural affinity to their motherland and they hold a certain amount of admiration."

(Contd. on Back Page, Col. 7)

UNLIKE BERLIN

"Hongkong's refugees from China, who form a third of the population, have been imposed on it by the Communist revolution."

"It is an escape route comparable to Berlin, but Hongkong, unlike Berlin, has found no way of passing westward those who seek freedom and safety there. The vast majority stay to live in equal, insanitary horrors called huts, there to breed the population for future slums."

"The effort made to build flats for the first 300,000 and now to build more flats and satellite towns has been heroic."

—Reuter.

"Hongkong, it is reliably learned, is not asking for 2.2 million (or HK$40 million) from Britain. This is the overall figure she is hoping to receive as a result of donations, government and private, from all over the world."

POWDERED MILK AND PAINT—A MIX-UP

Naples, Nov. 24.

Police and railway officials continued their search into the night for eight bags of white paint believed to be mixed with a shipment of powdered milk from Canada.

Half the shipment from the vessel "San Sebastiano" was found in rail cars here—but it was all milk.

The other half was on its way to Milan by rail, and police there stood by to search the boxcars as soon as they arrived.

The powdered milk, understood to be a consignment from the Canadian Government for distribution to underprivileged children in Italy, was contained in sacks almost identical to those in which paint was shipped.

No one knew quite how the paint was mixed in with the milk, or at what point along the route.—UPI.

THE GLENN FORDS DIVORCED AFTER 16-YEAR MARRIAGE

Santa Monica, Calif., Nov. 23.

Former screen dancing star Eleanor Powell, 47, won a divorce from actor Glenn Ford, 43, today after charging he was "anti-social" and "just doesn't care for people."

In her suit, which was not contested by the actor, she charged mental cruelty. The couple, married 16 years, have agreed on a $350,000 property settlement that gives Miss Powell $40,000 a year for six years and $30,000 a year for life after that. She also received half of the community property and support for Peter, their 14-year-old son.

The marriage was regarded as one of the happiest in Hollywood until Miss Powell said last May that they were parting.

ANTI-SOCIAL

She testified in court today that Glenn Ford was "very moody and anti-social." She added: "He made me very nervous and embarrassed me considerably. I had to be under a doctor's care for nervousness."

Miss Powell said sometimes he would just get up and walk out at social affairs.

Recently she has said: "My marriage wouldn't have lasted this long except for my religion and my feeling that I should keep the marriage together." She is now a Sunday School teacher.—Reuter.

British Film Runs Into Difficulties

London, Nov. 23.

A British producer who wants to film "The Charge of the Light Brigade" at the actual Russian site of Balaklava, has run into difficulties. Reason? Balaklava is near the atomic sub-base of Sevastopol and is a restricted area, says the Daily Mail.

If the Russians refuse, Marshal Tito has promised that the film can be made in Yugoslavia using his cavalry regiments.

The Mail said "the cast would include Rex Harrison, Sir Laurence Olivier, Sir Alec Guinness, Tony Curtis, Deborah Kerr, Peter Ustinov and James Mason."—UPI.

WHY MEN GO TO THE ANTARCTIC

Buenos Aires, Nov. 23.

Nagging wives, impossible marriages and tiredness of "keeping up with the Joneses"—these are some of the reasons why men go to live in the frozen wastes of the Antarctic, an Australian doctor with 12 years of polar expeditions said today.

But the men escaping from wife trouble were not usually good workers, while aggressive men were a menace.

Others who did not go into modern society often became happy and secure in the Antarctic where there was a completely classless society with no money worries and no concern for social status. Dr. Philip Law, who has led many Australian expeditions to the Great White South, gave these findings of his study of the motivations and behaviour of 500 men in the Antarctic when he addressed the tenth annual International geophysical year symposium. He said the ideal Antarctic workers were "men with pride and ambition that provide a driving force to forge ahead when the going is tough, but this should go hand in hand with a humble spirit and a self-critical outlook."

On the absence of women, Dr. Law said: "It is not merely a question of lacking sexual intercourse. Sexual deprivation in the narrow sense is not nearly as important as many people might expect."

The lack of female companionship in the wider sense is felt greatly. Men accept the absence of sex realistically with 'there's nothing you can do about it. Therefore, the less you think about it the better.'"

On homosexuality he said, "I found no overt cases, but no hidden tendencies."—Reuter.

London Manhunt For Second Jack The Ripper

London, Nov. 23.

"Scarnosed Mick," a criminal descendant of Jack the Ripper, was still on the loose today after eluding one of the biggest dragnets in London's history.

Mick is the name Scotland Yard has come up with for a man, believed to be a heavy drinking Irishman, who is the prime suspect for "Lost Weekend" assaults on—and possibly murders of—London women.

Before dawn today London police got nearly 800 persons out of bed in the Chelsea area after a weekend robbery on a tip that a man resembling Mick's description was seen in the neighbourhood.

Sealed Off

While approximately 500 apartments were sealed off and searched in a five-hour raid almost until daylight, there was no trace of Mick.

Police believe the man who committed the weekend robbery had a few drinks at the expense of the flat owner and is in possession of an unusual type of silver cigarette lighter, inscribed with the words, "Texas Sulphur Company."

More than 100 plainclothesmen are combing London for Mick.

Tips meanwhile kept pouring in.

Urgency is the order of the day because police believe his next strike will be murder if he hasn't killed already.

Mick is believed to go on the rampage after drinking heavily on weekends.

A Scar

The description given by a woman who recently was assaulted and the few clues left behind have led police to look for a man who talks with an Irish accent, and has a scar on the right side of his nose.

The official description also says that he has reddish-blond or ginger hair and that he likes to dress in loud windbreakers and shirts. He is believed to be five feet nine or 10 inches tall.

All assaults and housebreakings attributed to Mick have come on weekends.

A mother in the Fulham district was nearly strangled in her home with silk stockings on an October weekend. The following weekend a 71-year-old woman was battered unconscious.

One of the last swoops believed to be Mick's handiwork was on October 31 when a London lawyer's home was broken into.—UPI.

Wanted Man Now Reported Camouflaged

The gunman who shot a constable with a snatched revolver and escaped was reportedly sighted behind the Grantham Hospital in Wong Chung Hang, Aberdeen, yesterday.

His body was camouflaged with leaves and twigs. He was seen by a hospital nurse. He was then crawling from east to west in the hillsides. That was 3.15 p.m.

The police were informed and immediately conducted a search of the area with the help of tracking dogs.

The search which lasted from 5 p.m. to 6 p.m. was fruitless.

A Government spokesman said this morning that the search is still on. No arrest had been made so far.

HK Ship Adrift But Not In Danger

A Hongkong ship, Sze Seng, yesterday reported in distress off the south-east coast of Mindanao in the Philippines, "is in no immediate peril."

The captain said this in an SOS message.

The Sze Seng, owned and operated out of Hongkong by Wallem and Co., yesterday sent out an SOS to the effect that both her boilers were out of commission and she was drifting westward at two knots.

This morning the agents in Hongkong said they had received no further news, but that if any assistance was to be sent to the Sze Seng, it would be done from the Philippines.

FIRST SOS

The first SOS was picked up by the Radio Corporation of America's marine station in the Philippines, and it said the vessel was having great difficulty in establishing radio contact.

The skipper reported the first trouble some 97 miles east of Cape San Agustín, in the Southern Philippines, at noon yesterday. Both boilers, he reported, were out of action, but that crew members were working to repair one of them, while the ship drifted west at two knots.

The Sze Seng, of 5,025 tons, was formerly the River Hunter, owned by the Australian Department of Shipping and Transport.

She was built in Sydney, Australia in 1946. Wallem and Co. took her over in September this year.

Old Woman With $1600 Fined For Begging

A 95-year-old woman asked Central Magistrate Mr T. L. Yang this morning to return her a sum of $1,687 which she said she had saved to buy herself a coffin.

Ng Mui, of no fixed address, was found with the money in her possession last Friday when a detective arrested her for begging at a house in Shan Kwong Road, Happy Valley.

Ng appeared in court this morning on $50 bail, pleaded not guilty but was convicted and fined $10 after evidence given by the policeman.

When her name was called out by the court interpreter, Ng walked out slowly from the Public gallery with the aid of a stick, and was allowed to sit by the Magistrate.

DID NOT BEG

In the course of the hearing, Ng wiped tears from her eyes from time to time.

In an un-sworn statement, she said that she did not beg because she had so much money hidden. She added that she just sat outside a house at Shan Kwong Road and some children played the doorbell.

Asked if she had anything to say when she was found guilty, Ng asked the Magistrate to return her the money adding that she needed it to buy her coffin because she had no children. Mr Yang granted her request.

Hongkong's 15,000 "L" Drivers

CHINA MAIL REPORTER

There are now 15,000 learner-drivers waiting to take their driving tests, a spokesman of the Traffic Office revealed this morning.

Asked whether priority is given to a car owner in taking a test, the spokesman said that this was so insofar as the first test, but should the applicant fail he or she would have to wait their turn.

Exceptions are made, however, in certain cases where the applicant is a doctor or a person for whom a car is an absolute necessity.

It was, however, not necessary to wait a year in order to take a second test, the spokesman said.

Over 60 tests a day were conducted in Kowloon and Hongkong and the waiting list for tests at present stretches up to six months in Hongkong and about 12 months in Kowloon.

'MONTY' IS CALLED A 'BLITHERING IDIOT'

London, Nov. 23.

Field Marshal Viscount Montgomery, who remarked recently that anyone who voted Labour should be locked up in a lunatic asylum, was lambasted as a "blithering idiot" by an angry Socialist today.

Backbencher, Mr Norman Dodds applied the epithet to "Monty" and another who allegedly had made the same remark about people who voted Labour.

Mr Dodds' outburst followed a rounder by the Health Minister, Mr Derek Walker-Smith, that lunatic asylums now are referred to officially as "hospitals" in Britain.

"Have you told this to those two blithering idiots in the House of Lords—Lord Montgomery and his Right Honourable friend?" Mr Dodds asked.

The speaker, Sir Harry Hydon-Foster, rebuked him, "I hope I shall have the assistance of members in seeing that questions are conducted in an orderly fashion."—UPI.

Gronchi Will Visit Russia

FIRST POSTWAR TRIP
BY AN ITALIAN
CHIEF OF STATE

Rome, Nov. 23.
President Giovanni Gronchi will go to Moscow on January 8 for the first visit of an Italian Chief of State to Russia since World War II, the Foreign Ministry announced today.

President Gronchi.

Gronchi will be accompanied by Foreign Minister Giuseppe Pella, a communist ally. The visit will last about one week.

The Italian President will meet with "men of state of the USSR" while in Moscow, the announcement said. A Foreign office spokesman had said earlier some political talks will be included in the official visit.

The announcement said, Gronchi "has accepted with pleasure the Soviet invitation. He will visit Leningrad as well as Moscow during the trip."

SEE EISENHOWER

Gronchi's trip will come almost a month to the day after he sees President Eisenhower in Rome. The U.S. Chief of State will be here December 4-6.

The Government of Premier Antonio Segni approved Gronchi's trip to Moscow over some opposition from Roman Catholic circles here.

Informed sources said the Government has made it clear, however, that Italy wants the exchange of visits between Rome and Moscow to remain at the Chief of State level. This means Italy does not want a visit from Soviet Premier Nikita Khrushchev at this time. —UPI.

The road was closed to traffic until wreckage was cleared and the injured taken to hospitals. The second bus slipped on black ice and crashed down a ravine, slightly injuring 12 people. —Reuters.

China's Threat Greater Than Russia's

Quebec City, Nov. 24.

China is a greater threat to the peace of the world than Russia can be, Dr Felix Houphouet-Boigny, Prime Minister of the French Ivory Coast Republic said on Monday night.

This Chinese threat was one of several reasons why the Ivory Coast's 3,200,000 population backing France's President Charles de Gaulle supported French plans to explode an atomic bomb in the Sahara, the African Republic Prime Minister told newsmen at a press conference here last night.

Houphouet-Boigny is at present on a tour of Canada and the United States.

NO ILLUSIONS

"France must have her own nuclear bombs just as America and England. If we, of the Western world, are to maintain a balance against our possible foes who already have that dreadful formula," he added.

Houphouet-Boigny said his country, which has 25,000 Frenchmen within its fold, had always and will continue to oppose a united Africa because such a policy would open the door to China's overflow of population.

"We have no illusions because we believe that a united Africa would become an easier ground to Communist infiltration, not as much from Russia as from China," Houphouet-Boigny said.

"We are at present the battlefield of two ideologies and oppose this because we have fought for so long to obtain our own freedom and recognition," he added.

Within the next 50 years the great challenge to the free world will come from China, not from Soviet Russia, he predicted.—UPI.

Communist Movement Smashed In Kuwait

Kuwait, Nov. 23.
Informed sources here said today a Communist underground movement was smashed last week.

The sources said 71 people, including two women, were arrested in the second anti-Communist crackdown this year. Security forces caught most of them in a secret meeting and captured large numbers of documents, it was reported. An investigation now is in progress and the deputy ruler, Sheikh Abdullah Mubarak Al-Sabah will decide later whether to deport them.

Last spring Kuwaiti security forces rounded up roughly 300 alleged Communists and deported many of them. Informed sources said those arrested last week were mostly Syrian, Lebanese, and religious sect, with a few Iranians, Iraqis and Jordanians.—UPI.

France To Boycott Debate On Algeria

United Nations, Nov. 24.
France will boycott the UN debate on Algeria, a French spokesman said today.

She will also refuse to enter into any kind of contact with the top-level Algerian rebel delegation scheduled to arrive in New York this week, he added.

France will maintain her position that Algeria is a domestic affair—not one for UN debate.

French sources feel that the Algerians are "manoeuvring" to kill time before the debate, in the hope that a mildly-worded UN resolution urging both sides to negotiate will help the provisional government's hand.

The provisional government wants to link cease-fire negotiations with political questions. President Charles de Gaulle has made it clear that France will only discuss a cease-fire.

The decision to boycott the debate was taken after consulting Paris. Part of the UN delegation were understood to have pressed for an opening speech by France, before the delegation walked out.

The date of the Algerian debate still has not been definitely fixed. But the guess is some time next week.—UPI.

French Plans For A-Blast

Paris, Nov. 24.

France's first atomic explosion, planned for the Sahara desert in the spring, will probably be detonated above the ground, on a platform, informed sources said today.

The sources were commenting on Atomic High Commissioner Francis Perrin's statement last week that the first French atomic explosion will be "aerial." At the time this was interpreted in some quarters as indicating that France intended to drop its first "device" from a plane.

France's determination to go ahead with the test, regardless of the U.N. General Assembly vote urging its cancellation, was clear for all to see.

READYING EQUIPMENT

The sources said that France is in fact readying equipment for the eventual dropping of an atomic bomb from a plane. But they said this would not be the technique used for the critical first explosion.

Exactly what kind of plane the French will use was not known. At present France has no suitable bomber, but it was considered possible the "Nord Atlas" transport could be adapted for the purpose.—UPI.

Congress Backing For Nehru

New Delhi, Nov. 23.

A behind-closed doors meeting of Parliamentary members of India's ruling Congress Party tonight was reported to have given support to Indian Premier Jawaharlal Nehru's stand on the Sino-Indian border dispute on the eve of a Lower House debate on Sino-Indian relations.

A reliable source said the some ten members who spoke backed Nehru whereas a few days ago Nehru's Chinese policy was being criticised within the Party.

Nehru reiterated his stand that India would continue her policy of non-alignment in all circumstances, the source said.

CRITICISM

Nehru reportedly charged that strong criticism of his policies resulted from a campaign by right-wing parties but did not reflect the true feeling of the country.

Replying indirectly to attacks on Defence Minister Krishna Menon, Nehru was quoted as saying: "I alone am responsible for the defence of the country."

The Premier asked the members of the Parliamentary group to keep up the morale of the country, the source said. The Party was to meet again tomorrow, again behind closed doors.—AFP.

'Dream Girl' Fleeced Him Of His Entire Fortune

A once-rich landowner ruefully described here today how his "dream girl" gradually fleeced him of more than 30 million francs (about £22,000) to buy, among other things, a pair of golden kidneys.

The man, 55-year-old Jean Montgardet, said he had cut down some of the pines in his 145-acre grove thinking he would "get it all back."

Next Allice cabled him from Switzerland that she needed money for a "very serious operation" otherwise she could never bear him children.

Montgardet, who wanted an heir, said he decided to "cut down some more trees."

Shortly afterward she asked for more cash to pay for a "gift of golden kidneys" and he said it because "I figured it was normal, what with medical progress, and better than plastic, more solid."

Montgardet said he first got wild of the swindle when he agreed to let her "uncle, a Swiss surgeon," build a clinic in his vineyard, which he promptly uprooted.

When Allice and her uncle failed to show up Montgardet went to Basel to surprise her.

and there learned her real identity and the fact she lived only 30 miles from his estate.

NEW SUITS

An inquiry showed she had spent 12 million francs on a swank villa and three millions more to furnish it.

She did the floors with lavender-scented wax and her husband, an Alsatian labourer five years her junior, quit his job and bought 14 new suits in a week, Montgardet said.

He said she also had equipped a whole convent of nuns with motorbikes during a trip to Alsace.

Montgardet said he filed suit in September and was confident his savings would be returned to him when the case comes up here next Friday.

Allice denied all.

Montgardet said, hopefully, "Oh, it's true I lost everything, the pines, the land, my house, but I'm not afraid, with justice I'll get it all back." —AFP.

The Duke In Ghana Promises Longer Visit With Queen In 1961

Accra, Nov. 23.

Prince Philip confirmed here tonight that Queen Elizabeth will visit Ghana in 1961.

In the first public address of his six-day Ghana visit, the Prince said: "This is only a flying visit."

"In 1961, in company with the Queen, I hope to see much of your country and people."

The Duke's "Heron" plane touched down at Accra's international airport dead on schedule. He was welcomed by the Premier, Kwame Nkrumah, and Ghana's Governor-General Lord Listowel.

A 21-gun salute boomed out as the Duke was led to the saluting base where a guard of honour was mounted by young naval volunteers.

PAISED

The Prince's visit was agreed on as a "consolation prize" when the Queen's pregnancy caused cancellation of her Ghana visit.

In his welcoming address, the Mayor of Accra, E. C. Quaye, praised the Prince for his "keen grasp of affairs and eager interest in the progress of Ghana."

He added: "In times like the present in which the call for unity of the Commonwealth is insistent, 'Today the nation reaffirms its loyalty to the throne and wishes your Royal Highness a most enjoyable stay in this country'."

GREETINGS

Drums throbbed and cymbals tinkled in greeting as the Duke drove into Accra's gaily decorated main square in an open Rolls Royce.

The Duke walked under a huge yellow umbrella—the symbol of chieftaincy—through cheering crowds and past a group of chiefs wearing multi-coloured robes.

Prince Philip told the crowd how happy he was to be in Ghana and said he brought "warmest greetings from The Queen and the people of the United Kingdom." —Reuters.

CHARGED WITH INHUMAN ATROCITIES

Munich, Nov. 23.

The Bavarian Justice Ministry today released a horror-filled list of charges against former concentration camp guard Richard Buggalle.

The Ministry announcement said Buggalle will go on trial in Munich on January 12 next year charged with the murder of 26 inmates of the infamous Sachsenhausen Concentration Camp.

"One could feel ashamed to belong to the same people," a Ministry spokesman said in releasing the charges.

Buggalle was transferred to the Sachsenhausen Camp in 1937 and worked there with fellow guards Gustav Sorge and Wilhelm Schubert.

2 SENTENCED

Sorge and Schubert were sentenced in January this year to consecutive life prison sentences respectively for multiple murders.

Buggalle, now 52, allegedly forced 10 prisoners to perform a "bear dance" and then, one by one they were kicked over an earth wall behind a target area. There the prisoners were shot by their guards because it was forbidden to go behind the target area.

Buggalle also allegedly used to direct a powerful hose on a prisoner's throat or heart until he collapsed or died. The guard also is charged with beating prisoners with ice-cold water and had the prisoners stand naked outside in sub-zero temperatures.

Another victim allegedly was given hot and cold showers until he died, and another allegedly was kicked by Buggalle until his face was unrecognizable and his chest had collapsed.

Buggalle has been held for trial for two years. Besides the 26 murders, he is charged also with committing sadistic and inhuman atrocities.—UPI.

ATTACK ON HIGH PRICES

Paris, Nov. 23.

Some 130,000 of France's 150,000 grocery shops are to begin a vast attack on high prices tomorrow by putting into effect price reductions on 56 articles chosen in consultation with the Government.

The list includes most grocery dry goods, plus lower grade wines—the national drinks—fat products, and detergents. Bright-colored banners bearing the magic word "Baissa" ("reduction"), will mark the shops taking part in the voluntary price-lowering campaign.

OTHER FACTORS

Other factors, besides pure generosity, have contributed to bringing about the voluntary movement.

One factor is the current debate on the re-organization of distribution circuits, which has created a favourable atmosphere for the grocers to make some price concessions.

Another is the opening on the outskirts of Paris of a "Centre Leclerc"—one of a chain of cut-rate grocery stores operating at marginal profits on large-volume sales. This factor was further strengthened by news that the "Leclerc" chain would open another cut-rate store in the heart of Paris in December.—AFP.

'NO HOPE' BAR-TENDER ASTONISHES DOCTORS

Doctors in Seattle Veteran's Hospital told 37-year-old bar-tender Joseph W. Meyerle: "We cannot do anything for you."

Meyerle had lung cancer. He was sent home to die. The doctors gave him just a few weeks.

That was seven months ago. Today a red-cheeked, healthy, vigorous Joe Meyerle is astonishing the medical profession in Washington State. Unbelievably, he seems to be cured.

Joe Meyerle read how John Foster Dulles died of cancer in June this year after scarcely being able to eat for weeks. So Joe ate and ate.

"I forced myself to keep my stomach full," he says. According to the doctors this shouldn't have made any difference. But there is Joe, looking like a walking cure.

Looking for a job now, to support his wife and three children.

And smoking cigarettes, as he has done since he was 17.

SNACKING between meals may be a good idea—if you don't eat the meals. Dr. Clarence Cohn told the American Heart Association that three square meals a day may be harder on the heart and arteries than frequent nibbling.

SURPLUSES they are used to in the U.S. The new thing is a "surplus shortage."

The Government has almost run out of surplus dried milk, after piling up a huge stock of 666,000,000 lb. of it to support farm prices.

The U.S. Government gives it away to schools, institutions, and relief organizations overseas.

TRADE UNION leaders have told Governor Nelson Rockefeller that they expect him to pass a minimum wage law for New York State next year.

They want the minimum hourly rate fixed at one dollar fifty cents (10s. 6d.), which is $21.10s. a week.

A national minimum wage of one dollar (7s. 2d.) an hour already exists, though plenty of people—migrant farm workers for example—earn less than this.

The Federal Government can only enforce the minimum wage on employers who are engaged in inter-State commerce.

CHICAGO POLICE arrested James P. Hammond, aged 52, for questioning a cash robbery case. James was a fly one. He had stuffed the dollar bills down the hollow shaft of his wooden leg.

PLAYWRIGHT Lillian Hellman cannot think of a title for her new play which she has been writing for four years. So she will ask her friend Dorothy Parker.

Author and wit Parker gave Miss Hellman the title of her most famous play (and film): "The Little Foxes."

WASHINGTON TALK: "The TV quiz show I was on wasn't exactly fixed—but you were allowed to bring your own questions."

AFTER more than six months in this country, I am not looking forward to the day when I have to drive on British roads again. I didn't realise what an aggressive bunch of road-hogs the British were until I came to America.

For Americans are disciplined drivers. They stay in their lanes. They almost never get a chance to drive over 60 miles an hour. They are not put out when they are overtaken by faster cars.

Compared with the smooth, orderly flow of American road traffic, driving in Britain is like jungle warfare.

Believe me, Americans are amazed at the way the British fought it out along the new London-Birmingham motorway recently.

The New York Herald-Tribune says that our behaviour

on the roads shows "typical British aggressiveness."

"Shall we never know, in Britain, the deep, deep peace of a stoic American expressway?"

MRS. ELIZABETH MOLLY, of Joplin, Missouri, suddenly noted that her telephone was beginning to smoke. The plastic casing melted. The whole thing caught fire and started to scorch the table. The engineers can't figure how it happened.

LEARNING Russian is a real jaw-breaking business, says Brooke Johnston, a pretty teen-age college girl at Louisville.

It will be a fight. Soon there may be nobody writing words in Hollywood—and then, where will the actors be?

FAX-MAIL, a revolutionary new system of sending a letter, is being tried out in the U.S.

The letter never leaves the post office. It is instantaneously wired by a facsimile process to the receiving office.

AT Danny's Hideaway, a New York restaurant, somebody showed me a very funny game you can play with a menu.

"Read this menu carefully," said my New York friend, "and you will see it full of names of gangsters. These were some of the examples he gave me."

A notorious musician and the gang's chief "persuader" is Heef Stroganoff. His girl friend is called Peaches Melba.

The brains of the outfit is a cook named Ernie Benedict. One man they all despise because he's a coward, known through the underworld as Chicken Caccalora.

Merle walked up to Zsa Zsa and said: "I'm deeply hurt." "We cannot see Mr. Hayes for dinner," said Mr. Hayes for cocktails only.

"I'm deeply hurt," said Miss Gabor, and promptly left with Hayes, to whom she was once engaged.

RECORDS by blues singer Little Willie Holiday have sold so well since her death they are expected to bring in 100,000 dollars in royalties. Miss Holiday died a penniless drug addict last summer.

EX-CONVICT Walter Welchel, 40, was arrested in a New York hospital the other night, posing as a doctor. "What gave him away?" His suede shoes. Suede shoes are not smart in America, and no doctor would dream of visiting a hospital in them.

FILM writers who downed pens in Hollywood last month and went on strike against five independent film companies for a share of TV profits have won their case with the independents—and are now considering coming out against the major film studios.

Little setup between TV and film companies in the U.S. is quite different from Britain.

British film producers (e.g. EMI) agreed not to sell pictures to television, which they argue, is like cutting your own throat.

But in the U.S., thousands of hours of TV screening time are taken up showing old movies. Any picture made before 1948 can be sold to TV, where it is shown and resown over hundreds of stations.

What does the man who wrote the movie get out of this endless repetition of his work? He gets not a cent. The whole profit went to the film companies.

Now the five independent producers have agreed to pay the writer four per cent of the profit from TV sales. And the writer can demand a similar deal from the big studios.

MORE than a quarter of New York City's population is Jewish. But only about three to four per cent of juvenile delinquents is Jewish.

IMPERSONATED MOTHERStopped
Away From School

London, Nov. 23.
A 14-year-old girl admitted at East London Juvenile Court that she impersonated her mother on the telephone to explain why she had stopped away from school.

Mr. Benjamin Beach, school inquiry officer, told the court that the girl had made only eight attendances at school out of a possible 48. He called at the girl's home but as there was no one in he left a letter for her mother. The same afternoon someone telephoned his office saying she was the mother and the girl was ill.

After further non-attendance at school by the girl the "mother" again telephoned and said her daughter was seriously ill and had been taken to a London hospital. She also added that "everything was all right at home now — my husband had come back to me."

Mr. Beach said that when he later called at the girl's home she admitted making the telephone calls.

The girl was remanded for two weeks for a probation officer's report. — China Mail Special.

Britain's only gold mine is up for sale, the Daily Mail reports today.

The mine with a mile-long shaft is on the slopes of the Cambrian Mountains, in Merioneth, North Wales.

The newspaper quotes him as saying: "There's plenty of gold left in there...."

"Trouble is I have not the capital for mining machinery to make a real job of it." — China Mail Special.

A PLAN to cut the rates by running a sweepstake four times a year, is to be considered by Fleetwood (Lanes) Corporation.

The entertainments committee have been told that it could bring in at least £40,000 a year. Their manager, Mr. Charles Carlton-Smith, suggested that they should press for an amendment in the new betting and gaming bill to make it legal.

"Four big races a year could produce that amount," he said. People who bought tickets would know they were helping to bring their rates down even if they did not win.

Members agreed that a sub-committee should consider the possibilities. — China Mail Special.

'William The Conqueror'
Will Cost £2,500,000*OLIVIER AND BRANDO
TO CO-STAR?

London, Nov. 23.

ARTISTES and technicians from eight countries will take part in the £2,500,000 film, "William the Conqueror" on which work is due to start next year.

The International Road Show Company, which is making the film, said the eight countries were Britain, France, the United States, Germany, Switzerland, Holland, Italy, and Yugoslavia.

Sir Laurence Olivier

The announcement gave no names, but a London evening newspaper suggested that Sir Laurence Olivier had been offered one of the leading male parts, that of King Harold and had been asked to direct the film, while it was hoped that American actor Marlon Brando would take the other male lead, that of William.

Female Lead

The newspaper said that it was hoped that Maria Schell, the German actress, would take the female lead.

Uniforms Called "Frumpish And Uncomfortable"

London, Nov. 23.
Some of the 300 girls at Greenmore College, Birmingham, are reported to have refused to wear a school uniform designed by Norman Hartnell, the Queen's dressmaker.

According to Press reports, they describe the uniform as "frumpish and uncomfortable."

A number of them, aged 11 to 16, are refusing to wear the £14. 14s. uniform—grey pleated skirt and short matching jacket, topped by a white Quaker collar. Lisle stockings and black lace-up shoes are worn with it.

One 14-year-old is quoted as saying: "We expected something more glamorous and modern. The uniforms make us look as if we belong to some kind of institution." — China Mail Special.

would be filled by British and American actors and that a German actress would take the female lead, while the director would be one of the top British directors.

It said that the final stages of scripting were in progress, and negotiations were being conducted with the stars to take part in the film.

Sir Frank Stenton, professor of history at Reading University, near here, and author of a novel, "William the Conqueror," had agreed to act as technical adviser and was at present assisting in research and completion of the historical aspects of the play.

12,000 Cast

The announcement said that filming would take place mainly in Britain, as well as in France, Germany, and Yugoslavia.

The cast would total over 12,000, and in addition 3,000 horses, 400 boats and 1,000 barges would be needed. — China Mail Special.

JUDGE'S ILLUSIONS SHATTERED

London, Nov. 23.

Mr Justice Upjohn has "had his illusions shattered" about the origin of Axminster and Wilton carpets.

He was presiding at the Restrictive Practices Court, which began consideration of whether two agreements of the Federation of British Carpet Manufacturers are in the public interest.

The court had been told by Mr W. P. W. Anderson, giving expert evidence for the federation, that Axminster carpet as it is known today did not originate at Axminster. It was introduced into the country from the USA about 1878. Neither did Wilton carpet originate at Wilton.

MATTER OF INTEREST

"As a matter of interest," said Mr Justice Upjohn, "where did Wilton come from? My illusions have been shattered."

Mr Anderson said that Wilton was derived from the Brussels weaver. It came from Brussels about the same time as Axminster came from the United States.

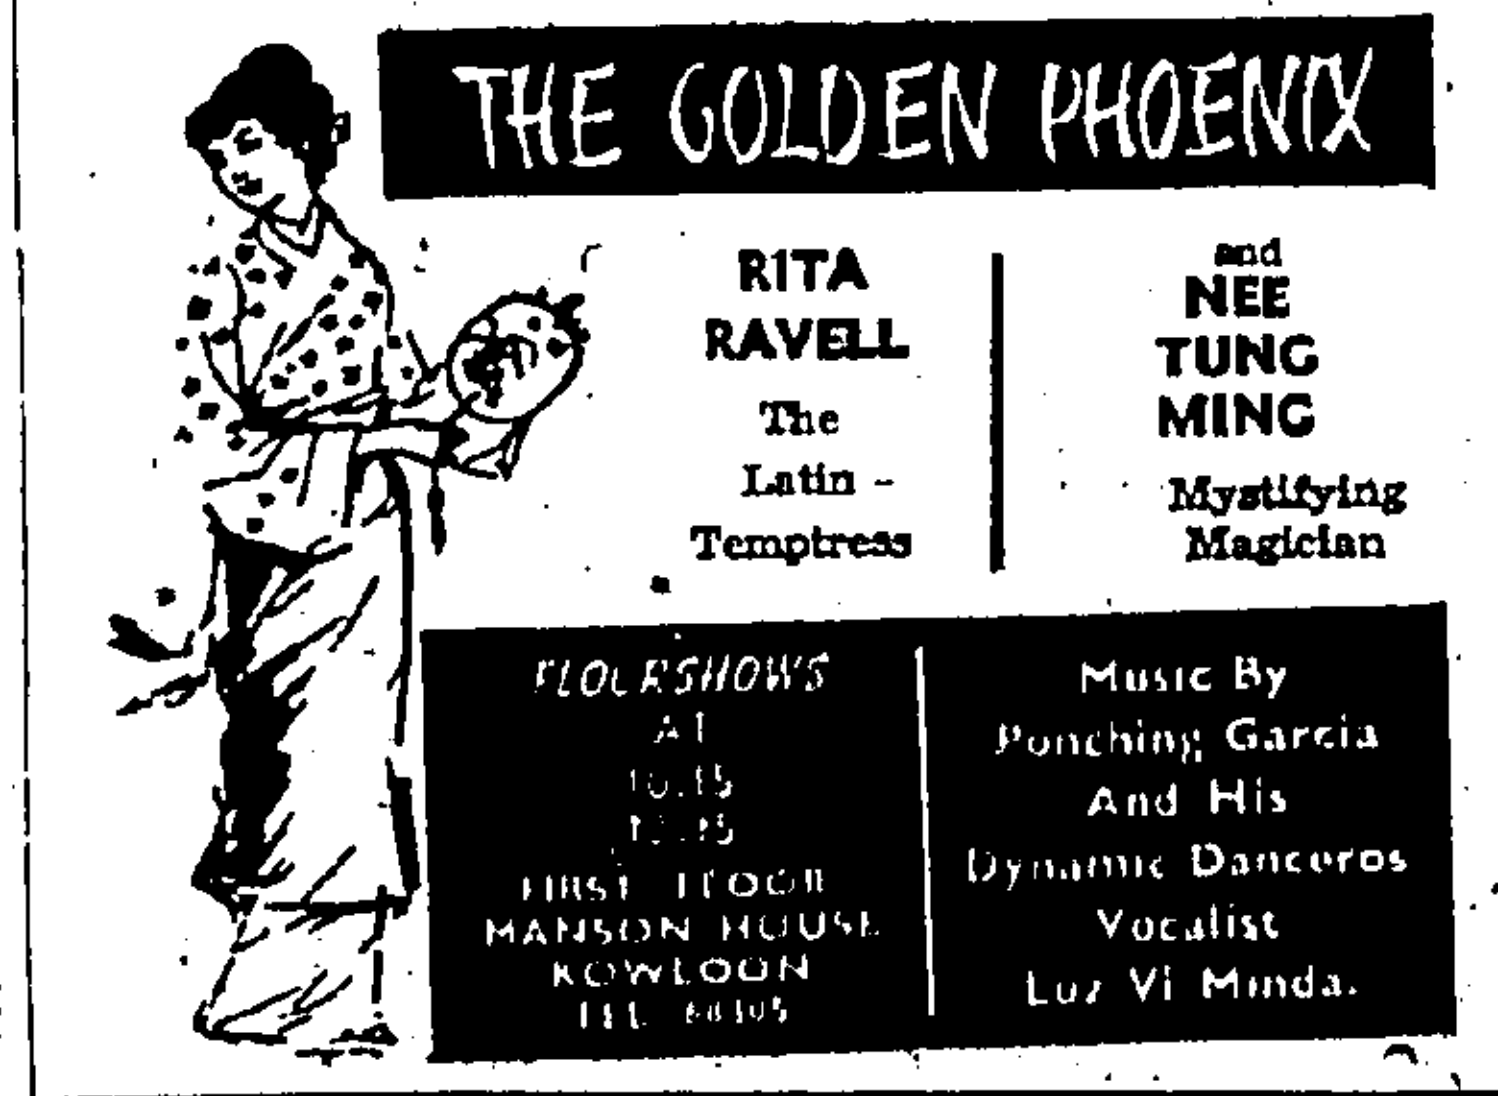

People were sent out from Kidderminster—then a depressed weaving town—to search for new industry, and they returned with the carpet industry. — China Mail Special.

Rediscovered
Sculptures
Fetch £14,200

London, Nov. 23.

Seven sculptures, until recently let into the wall of the tuckshop at Canford School, Dorset, were sold by Sotheby's in London for a total of £14,200. The reliefs were excavated by Sir Henry Layard at Nineveh over 100 years ago. They were all that remained of the collection of Assyrian sculpture formed at Canford Manor by Sir John Guest, Lady Layard's father.

The reliefs were let into the wall high up in the private museum — now the tuckshop — and covered with paint. They were only recently rediscovered and have been sold by order of the governors. — China Mail Special.

WHO KNOWS AND TELLS IN HIS OWN UNMISTAKABLE WAY

How can a man like
Erskine
Caldwell convince a woman that he's not as hot as his books?

CALDWELL—NOT A WORD IN ANGER

ERSKINE CALDWELL is sober, retiring, and—according to his fourth wife—taciturn. He wears dark suits, funereal un-American ties, and an expression of sad tolerance. You would expect him to be a State Department official from Washington.

You would never mistake him for a low-living, hard-drinking, unwashed character from "Tobacco Road."

But of course authors seldom resemble the characters they create.

And the public are still convinced that authors should. Which makes life difficult for authors like Mr Caldwell, chronicler of low life in the Deep South, once described as "America's No. 1 cracker-barrel pornographer."

As Mr Caldwell said when we sat in the pneumatic comfort of a Savoy Hotel suite—

"It can be quite embarrassing sometimes, especially at these literary cocktail parties."

"I remember once a man came up to me at a party in New York and started swearing. He poured out a whole mouthful."

Women

"I suppose he thought I talked like that because some of my characters might."

"He was quite startled when I told him I never swear. And I don't like to hear other people swearing."

Added Mr Caldwell, son of a Presbyterian preacher: "Then there's the women. They're apt to get the wrong ideas if they've read any of my books. I suppose they expect me to be some kind of sex maniac."

I asked 54-year-old Mr Caldwell how he dealt with such women. He contemplated his gin and tonic and glanced across at his fourth wife, 38-year-old Virginia, to whom he has been happily married for two years. He said:—

"In the first place I'm not interested. But if a woman sorta throws herself at you, then you've got to be polite and tactful. It's not too difficult when you know the formula."

I wanted to know the formula. Mr Caldwell said hesitantly: "Well, it varies a bit in each case. Sometimes you can just advise them to curl up with a good book."

Ideas

I still didn't know the exact formula for dealing with over-cager women, though I imagine I can survive without it.

Mr Caldwell was even more hesitant about his creative processes.

"I don't know where the ideas come from. When I'm ready to write I just sit down and write. I put it straight on to a typewriter. Learned to do that as a cub reporter."

Money

"I work regular hours. Nine to five every day. But some days I get nothing down on paper. I take about 10 months to finish a novel."

"When it's finished and it satisfies me I don't care very much about what happens to it. I'm not desperately interested in how many copies are sold and how much money is made."

Mr Caldwell can afford to make casual statements like this, secure in the knowledge that his books are world-wide successes. They have been translated into almost every language except Urdu. "Tobacco Road," which is probably the best seller of them all, made him about £250,000.

He talked about money and material things with a dreamy air.

"I haven't done anything in particular with my earnings except spend them."

"Anyway I hate being burdened with possessions. I refuse to own an automobile now. When I want one I just hire it. I don't own a house. It's too much of a worry."

Pirates

He is returning to San Francisco where he lives for the moment after a visit to Russia and several European countries.

For a man who is not interested in money he was remarkably accurate about the state of his royalties in Russia.

"They've sold about a million copies of my books, so they owed me quite a bit in roubles. About 10,000 dollars. Or over £3,000 in your money."

"In Turkey I discovered they had published about sixteen of my titles, and just ignored things like royalties."

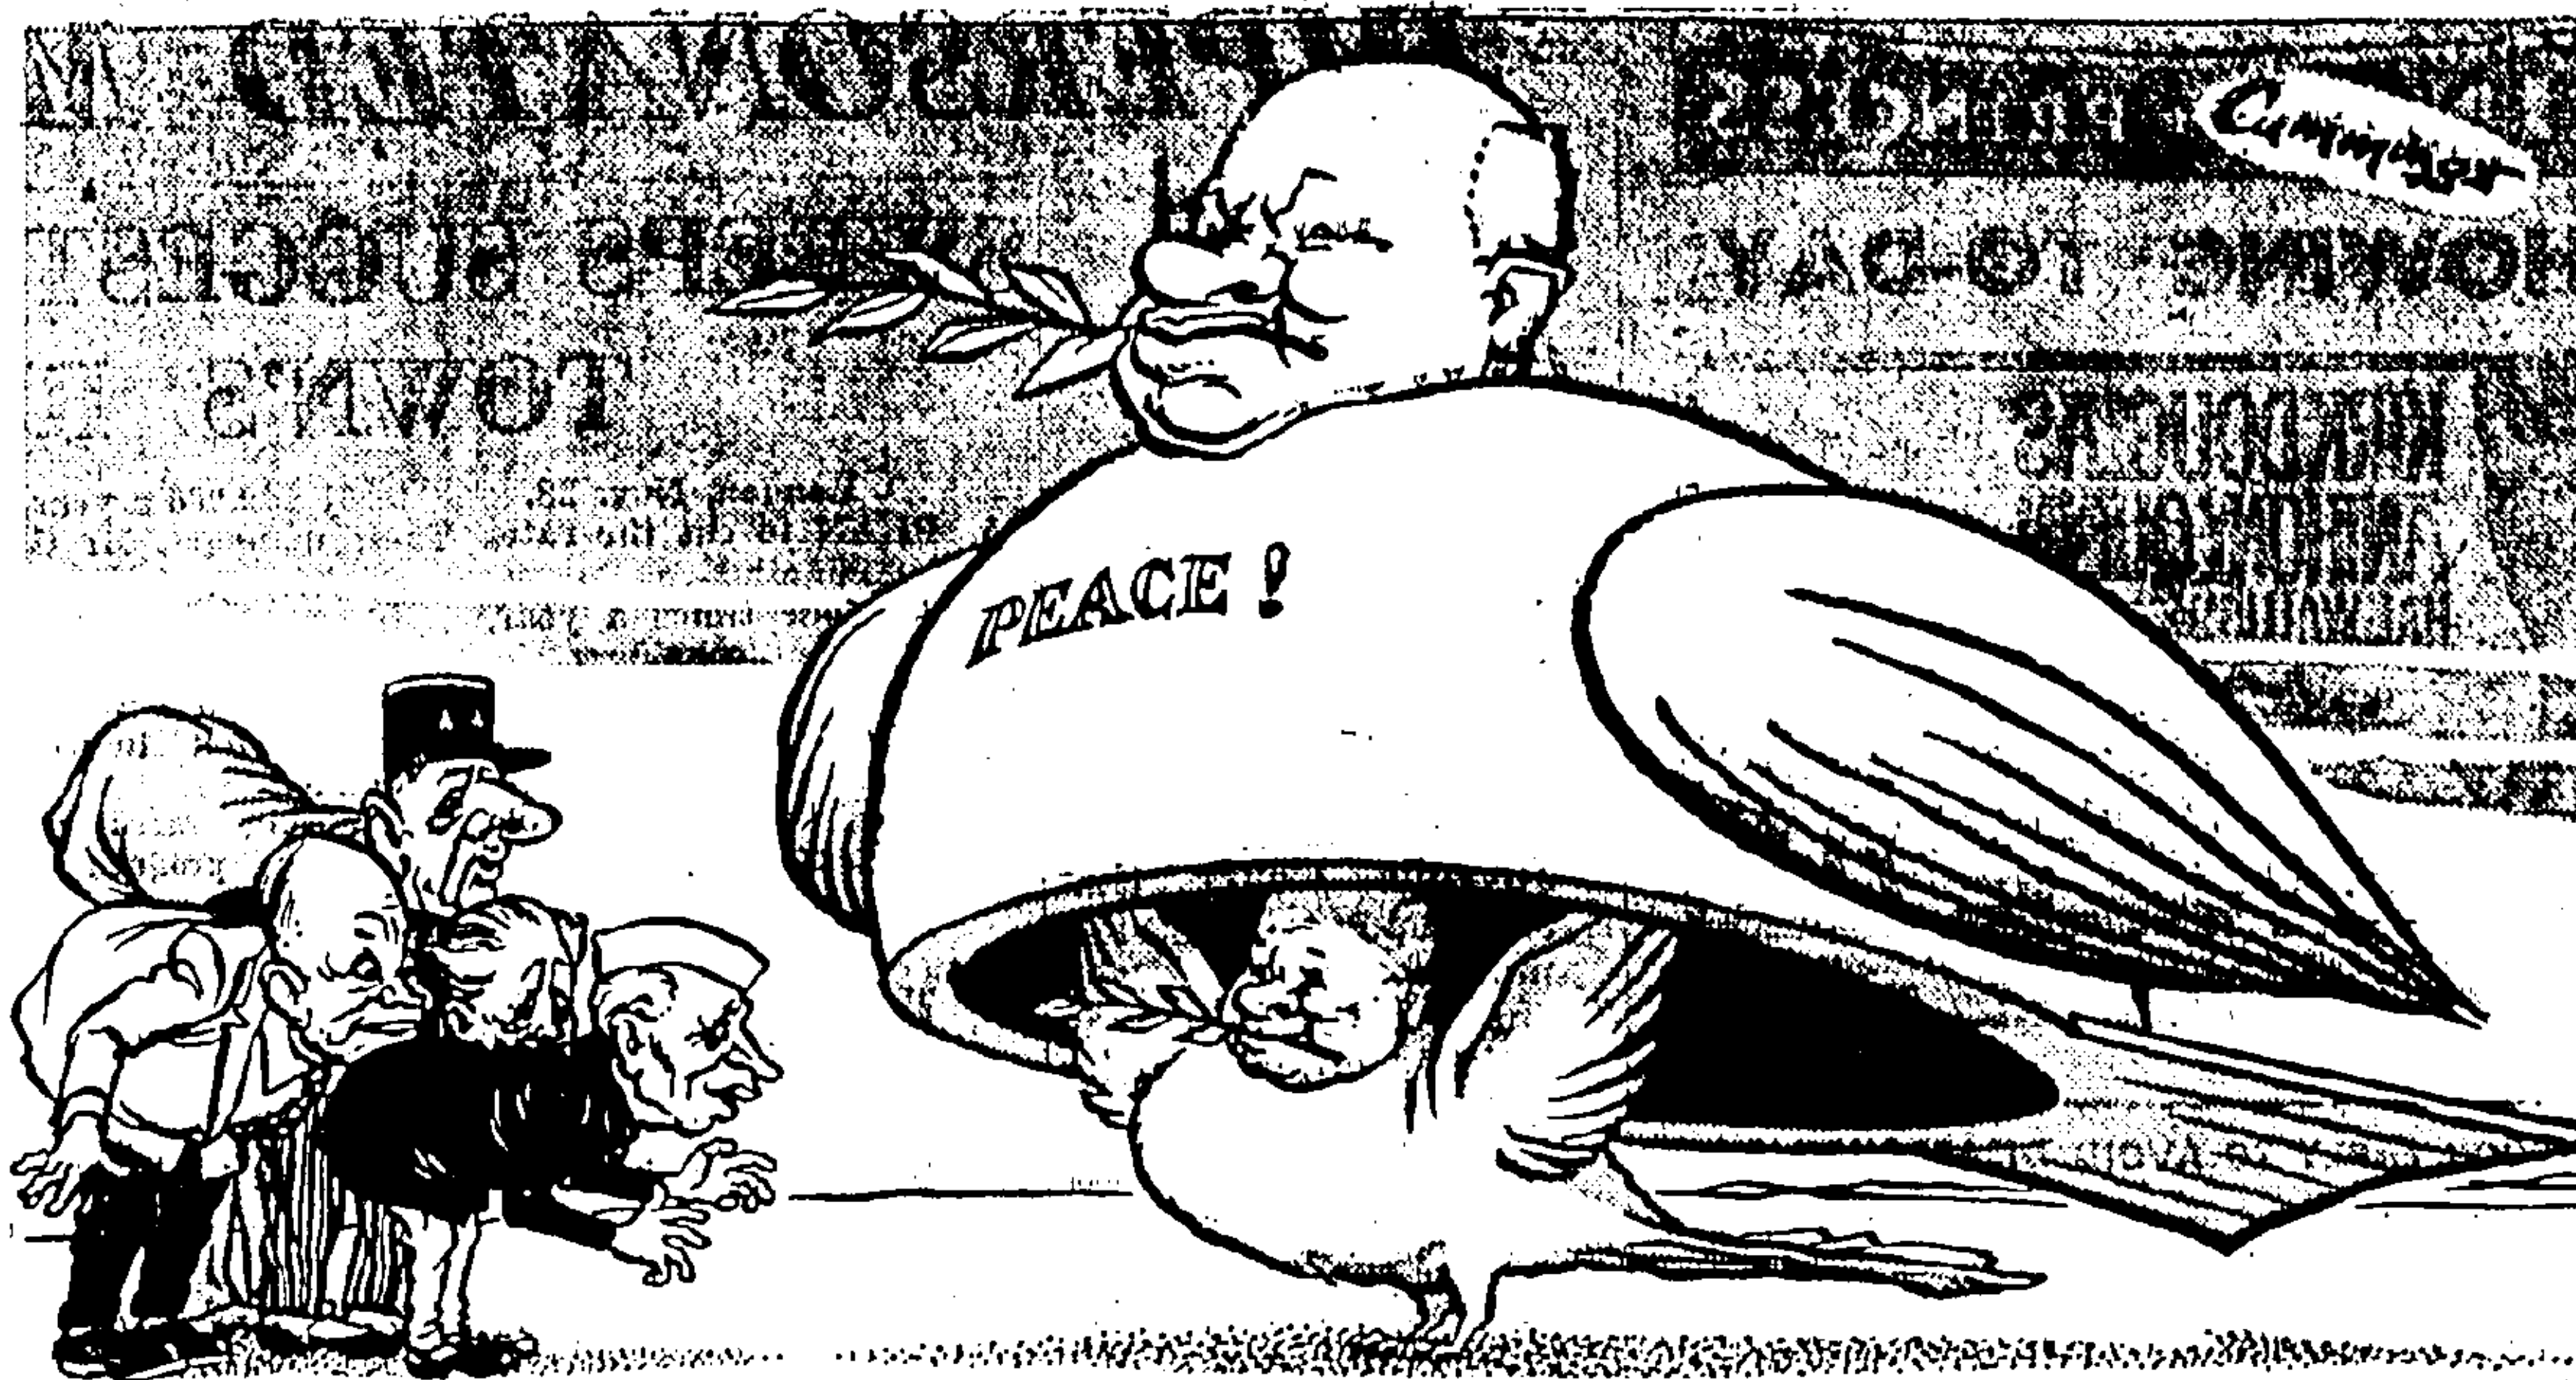

"You can't stop them pirating..."

He paused and looked glum. It was as close as the non-swearing Mr Caldwell got to saying "damn"—or something.

RENE MacCOLL, on Assignment Africa, is in the middle of—

War in the Mountains of the Moon TRIBAL WARRIORS SLAIN IN HUNDREDS

From RENE MacCOLL

Ruanda-Urundi. THIS, then, is the legendary land of the Mountains of the Moon.

This is the land of King Solomon's mines, of leaping giants, and of pigmies who hunt naked in the forest.

It is a wildly beautiful land as austere as a piece of old marble.

It is almost on the Equator, but because of its height, its 10,000ft-tall peaks are as gloriously cool as the pearl-grey dawn that seized upon my aircraft the other morning.

This is Ruanda-Urundi, harsh and barren, hard by Lake

Tanganyika, and ringed by still-active volcanoes.

This is the latest spot in Belgium's uneasy African domain to shudder under the crunch of modernity and to erupt in yet another blast of hatred and violence as that strange word "independence" stalks out of the dictionaries and suddenly has naked meaning.

Deaf ear

Several hundred are believed to have been killed in this civil war.

Once again the distracted Belgians fly in their loyal black troops, the Force Publique, the crack para-military police officered by whites.

Black police have so far turned a resolutely deaf ear to the frenzied shouts of their rioting fellow Africans elsewhere, shouts of: "Why do you shoot us? Turn your guns on the whites!"

And just what is the immediate trouble in this strange place, where the gigantic Watutsi warriors can leap their own height without raising their pulse rate, who maintain their own corps de ballet and are wont to tour the kraals in gleaming Cadillacs?

Well, out of a total population of four and a half million there are only around 30,000 Watutsi—but for as long as anyone can remember the Watutsi have been the bosses.

By far the biggest group in the population, 85 per cent, are the Bahutu, and until now they have allowed the Watutsi to kick them around in docile fashion.

The pigmies

I'm not kidding about these Watutsi. I stand six foot three in my socks, but when I clapped eyes on my first Watutsi just now—he must have been a good seven and a half—I felt like a midget.

The pigmies who live here are held in contempt by all, and are unkindly referred to as "Inyamaswa" or sub-humans. But they are battling alongside the Watutsi against the Bahutu. The Watutsi's worship, like-nesses of lyre-horned cattle with the features of the Egyptian goddess Hathor.

Cattle are very important in this neck of the mountains, not only for the usual reasons, but as a social success symbol.

A Watutsi wishing to keep up with the equivalent of the Joneses hereabouts, boasts first of his herd of longhorns and only second of his car.

Now the Bahutu have decided to turn on the Watutsi.

In Ruanda-Urundi there is martial law and there is a heavy armed police guard posted about the palace of the Mwami (king) Kigeli V.

For the Mwami is a Watutsi, and the authorities are understandably apprehensive lest the Bahutu want to grab the king's five sacred drums, symbol of authority.

How long?

Does anyone seriously believe that once the Belgians go this place will be quiet and orderly? Who is going to run it?

How long will relatively tiny Ruanda-Urundi last alongside the soon-to-be-liberated and enormous Congo?

Will my new acquaintance Jolly Joe Kasavubu, of Leopoldville, stand for a separate Ruanda-Urundi? Or will he decide to knock it off for breakfast?

I am reporting from Usumbura, which resembles a neat American Western town that got built in the tropics. But beautiful.

It gets very cold here at night and one needs thick blankets. Yes, you've guessed it—to keep the Watutsi warm.

Hot cargo for Castro

New York.

JUST over a year ago a party of sullen Cuban stevedores unloaded a cargo of elderly British-built Sea Fury fighter planes from a ship tied up in Havana Harbour.

The planes had been sold by Britain, along with a handful of tanks and a large consignment of ammunition, to Cuba's outlawing, unpopular dictator Fulgencio Batista.

And they looked as if they might turn the tide in Batista's last ditch fight against Cuba's popular hero, rebel chieftain Fidel Castro.

Hunters

The shipment almost wrecked future relations between Castro and Britain virtually on the eve of the rebel victory.

But today Castro rules Cuba from Batista's once luxurious, white-painted presidential palace. He is backed by the fanatical adoration of Cuba's half-starved masses.

And Anglo-Cuban relations have been laboriously rebuilt. But today a second shipment of British-built fighter planes threatens to smash our restored cordial relations. Not because it is coming, but because it looks as if it is not.

The new planes are not ancient, crackling veterans of the Second World War such as Britain sold to dictator Batista. They are fast, up-to-date Hawker Hunter jet fighters, by the standards of Latin American warfare they are world-class.

Fidel Castro, the ten-fingered out-reacher, has been out-reached by internal rebellion and external co-operative." But Britain has pleaded that the Hawker Hunters are intended for purely domestic Cuban defence purposes. And it has so far only delayed the shipments.

And Norway, which recently sent a large cargo of small arms into Havana, claimed improbably that the consignment was due to "an administrative error."

Sceptical

Washington is sceptical about these excuses. Its top Caribbean experts fear that the avid desire for sound "defence" in Cuba and the Dominican Republic could set off a full scale crusade by one against the other.

For the State Department does not like the Communist threat in the Caribbean lightly. And its experts recognise that a war between two bitterly hostile and heavily armed nations in the area could provide the Soviet bloc with just the excuse it needs to step openly into a region which the United States regards as its own backyard.

But the State Department campaign against the European arms dealers does not stop in the Caribbean.

It is almost equally alarmed by the wholesale unloading of obsolete weapons by the Nato armies all of which are now being re-equipped with modern, standardised arms.

Still, some of the old Lee-Enfield rifles, in the past year,

Most of them have gone to American dealers, and advertisements are already common in U.S. newspapers offering them for sale at knock-down prices.

Those guns so openly and harmlessly on sale at Gimbels and Mayors may find their way southwards to Florida, where 200 landing-strips and hundreds of mercenary pilots with rickety old planes are ready to despatch little bands of ambitious men in Cuba, Venezuela, Nicaragua, Haiti, Panama, Guatemala, and a dozen other unstable Latin-American republics.

Now the United States has announced that it is opening an all-out civil war on the Florida gun runners. National guards and coastguard chiefs have been alerted to inspect all known air strips at hourly intervals and to ransack the State for so far unknown ones. And 200 extra immigration officials are being rushed south to join the hunt.

Protest

The occasion of this sudden spurt of activity, a later public protest from Fidel Castro that Cuban "counter-revolutionaries and agents of the Dominican Republic have been operating a virtual 'air service' of light planes in and out of Cuba from the Florida air strips.

The planes have shipped pilots, gun runners, and other accessories, and the radio equipment and other aircraft equipment. And they have shipped out hundreds of hunted former members of the defeated Batista regime.

The U.S. authorities, which it is half-successful, warning that days ahead of the Latin revolutionaries, it is even thinner than the world-wide brotherhood of merchants of death.

THE LURE OF THE LUNCHEON VOUCHER

IT'S THE WORST OF THE BRIBES THAT KILLS A GIRL'S WILL TO WORK

Reads For Pleasure—And Gets Paid For It

By ANNE HEYWOOD

THE most seemingly impractical, blue-sky kind of venture can make money if entered into with enthusiasm. And the most practical dollars-and-cents venture can fail if entered just for the money.

The other day I met a lady from Ohio who gives book reviews.

No Special Training

"I had no special training," she told me, "but I've always loved to read."

"When we move to a new town, my first step is to get a library card and get acquainted with the library and its staff."

She Enjoyed Giving The Club A "Book Talk."

I read all the best sellers and all the book news in my newspapers and magazines.

Sounds Un-Commercial

That sounds like a very uncommercial interest, doesn't it?

But one day the club to which this woman belongs found itself in a dilemma. They had contracted with an out-of-town lecturer, for a big fee, for a special programme for which they needed a good speaker.

At the last minute, the speaker was taken ill and couldn't make it.

Volunteer Book Talk

Rather than cancel the programme and turn away lots of out-of-town guests, our lady volunteered to give a book talk.

"Turn here," said Mr. Merlin to Knarf and Hanid.

"Turn here," said Mr. Merlin to Knarf and Hanid.

it rang. And by and by, the door was opened by a Canary, wearing a cinnamon pair of trousers.

"Good morning, Professor Canary," said Mr. Merlin.

"Good morning, Mr. Merlin," twittered the Canary.

"I've brought along two of my friends. They'd like to take a singing lesson, too, I think."

"Yes," said Hanid, speaking for herself and her brother Knarf.

Led Them In

Professor Canary led them all into a large room.

"What kind of a singing lesson would you like, my dears?" Professor Canary asked Knarf and Hanid.

Knarf and Hanid looked surprised.

"Are there different kinds of singing lessons?" Knarf asked.

Many Different Kinds

"Oh yes," said Professor Canary. "You can have a Bird singing lesson, or a Frog-singing lesson, or a Cat-singing lesson, or a Baby-singing lesson, or a Squawling and screaming, or a dripping-rain-singing lesson, or a running-water-singing lesson."

Knarf and Hanid didn't know what kind of lesson to choose.

"Have a little of all of them," Mr. Merlin suggested.

And that's what Knarf and Hanid had in the wonderful music school where Mr. Merlin, the Magnificent Magician, went for his singing lessons.

CHILDREN'S CORNER

Mr. Merlin's Teacher

—A Canary Gives The Shadows A Singing Lesson—

By MAX TRELL

KNARF and Hanid, the Shadows with the Turned-About Names, were sitting in the sunshine on the back steps of the house, singing a song together.

I forget what song it was they were singing. It might have been "Sing a Song of Sixpence" or "Pop Goes the Weasel," or "Frere Jacques."

Another Voice

In any case they were just about in the middle of the song when they heard another voice joining in. They looked around. It was their friend Mr. Merlin, the Magnificent Magician.

So all three sang the song together. When they finished, Mr. Merlin asked:

"You didn't know I could sing, did you?"

Knarf and Hanid said they didn't know Mr. Merlin could sing at all.

"And you sing very well," added Hanid. "You have a lovely voice."

Singing Lessons

"I've had singing lessons," said Mr. Merlin. "In fact I was on my way to take my lesson when I heard you two singing."

Now that they looked at Mr. Merlin closely, they saw he was dressed in a neat blue suit with a white carnation in his button-hole. He was carrying a roll of music.

Mr. Merlin looked at the watch on his wrist.

"Oh my," he said. "I said I'd be at my singing teacher's at eleven o'clock. It's very nearly that now."

"Ah, I have an idea. How would you two like to come with me?"

Want To Go

Knarf and Hanid said they would like very much to come with Mr. Merlin.

"It's really a music school," Mr. Merlin said as they hurried down the street.

"Turn here," he said.

They went down a side street which, for some reason or other, Knarf and Hanid had never noticed before.

It was a strange sort of street. There were a dozen rather small houses and, then, at the end of the street, a rather large house with round windows.

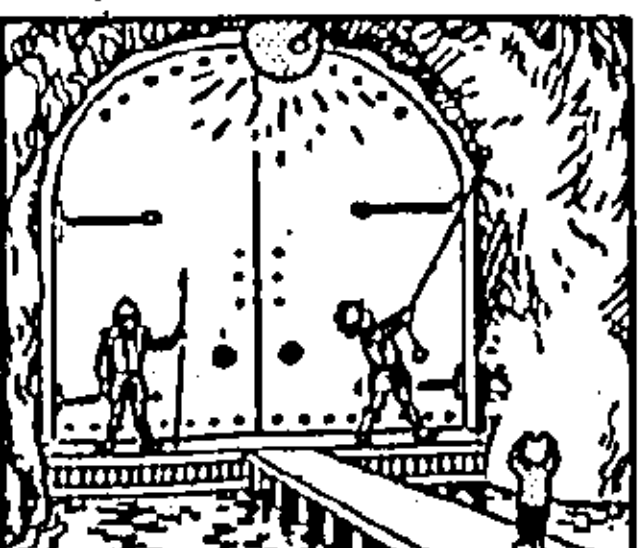

Knarf noticed a curious thing as they approached the house. In the back yard he saw five clotheslines one on top of the other with things that looked like notes hanging from their stems and drying.

Knarf didn't have time to tell Mr. Merlin about this because Mr. Merlin had reached the doorway of the house and was ringing the bell.

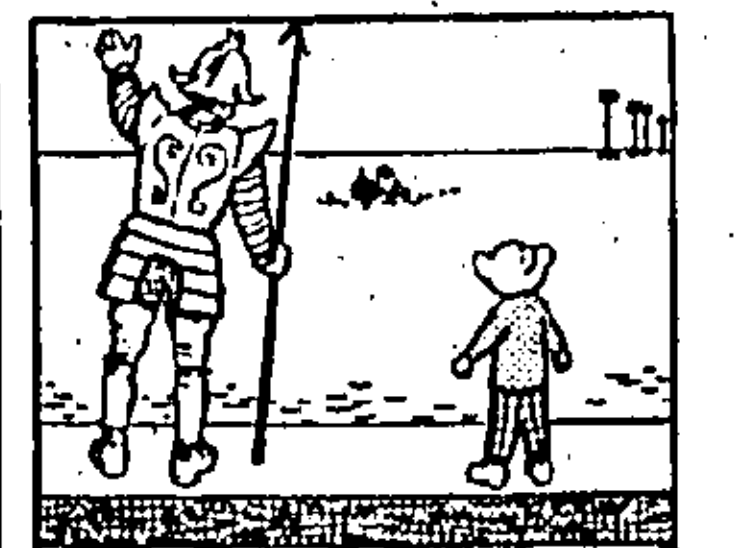

Canary Opens Door

The bell made the sound of the song "Yankee Doodle" as

Rupert and the Whistlefish—28

In another moment the great doors have shut with a clang, and one of the soldiers, tugging at a long cord, makes a hammer crash against a large gong over his head. "Oo, what a fearful noise!" Rupert quavers as he covers his ears. "Why has that old man left me alone with these soldiers? I shan't be able to understand a word they say. And what have they banged that gong for?" As if in answer a soldier pushes him some way back along the causeway over the sea, and a little boat heads rapidly towards them.

How To Eat Ice Cream Without Gaining Weight

FROZEN FRESH PEACHES top the ice cream that fills a Snowy Peach Pie. A light-as-a-feather meringue shell makes the "crust."

"NO one food is responsible for more eating pleasure than ice cream," I was saying. "With food freezers in many homes, gallon and half-gallon containers of ice cream can be stored ready-to-use; and with pint-cartons of ice cream and sherbets, in frozen food cases available to small families without freezers, we are in the ice cream age."

"It is not enough today to serve desserts as is," observed the Chef.

"For example, with a good bread-and-butter custard, warm gingerbread, a fine pie, or appetizing rice pudding, the family calls for ice cream on top. Then before long, everyone must go on a reducing diet."

The Chef thoughtfully patted his waistline and concluded: "To serve desserts a la mode tastes very good. But to eat whole portions of two desserts, one on top of the other, that bulges the waistline."

WAY OUT

"There's a way out, Chef," I said, "so that ice cream topped desserts can be enjoyed in moderation without causing the scales to go on a rampage. Just eat half as much of both dessert and ice cream!"

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

When salving buttons from a discarded garment, thread all those of the same kind and size together. This saves the time spent in searching through a wardrobe, the bottom of which is littered with loose buttons.

Sew zip fasteners on your cushion covers. These save a lot of time in unlicking and resewing when the covers are due to be washed.

IN just three months "I'm all right, Jack," has become the biggest cliché since "I couldn't care less." The clock-watching take-it-easy sort of worker has become a national joke. But who created the clock-watcher?

Studying this week's advertisements for vacant jobs, I've decided that if an employer finds his staff spending the day playing poker in the cloakroom, he has only himself to blame. I have read hundreds of jobs in shops and advertisements for offices.

Ninety per cent of them describe the bribes, the perks, the hols, the light work, and the short hours.

Only a tiny few suggest that the work is interesting or that the worker might find pleasure and fulfillment in the job.

Read these three typical advertisements.

JACOBY on BRIDGE

THE elimination play consists of eliminating all unfavourable leads before your opponents can make them. Here is an interesting example played by Dick Zeckhauser of Great Neck.

He won the opening club lead in his own hand, played a heart to the ace, ruffed a heart, entered dummy with a trump, ruffed dummy's last heart, played a club to dummy's ace and ruffed dummy's last club.

This eliminated all the clubs and hearts from the North and South hands and Dick now led a diamond with the intention of playing the eight from dummy. This play would be a sure thing for the contract but West foiled his plan by going up with the nine spot.

Nothing daunted Dick; he played dummy's ace, got back to his hand with another trump lead and played toward the queen of diamonds. West played low and Dick went up with dummy's queen only to have it lose to East's king.

The elimination play had worked anyway. East was left with nothing but hearts and a club and had to give Dick a ruff and discard, making his contract.

D'AMATO DEPRIVED OF LICENCE

Patterson's Manager Found Guilty On Four Of Five Boxing Commission Charges

ROSENTOHN ENTERPRISES SUSPENDED

New York, Nov. 23.

The New York State Boxing Commission today announced it had withdrawn the manager's and second's licence of Cus D'Amato, manager of former world heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson.

The Commission has also suspended the promoter's licence of Bill Rosensohn, the man who organised the world heavyweight title fight between Patterson and Sweden's Ingemar Johansson at New York on June 26.

Johansson: I'll Give Floyd A Chance

Geneva, Nov. 23.

World heavyweight boxing champion Ingemar Johansson said today he would give Floyd Patterson a chance to win back the crown despite the fact he has never had a contract with the American fighter.

Ingo said the fact the New York State Boxing Commission revoked the licence of Patterson's manager, Cus D'Amato, and the rematch technically problematic.

"I have never had a contract with Patterson, thus it seems when D'Amato is disqualified and Patterson has a contract with him, Patterson cannot fight me unless he changes managers."

"It does not seem there can be a fight or so it now looks."

The Swede said in halting English.

THE RIGHT THING

"I don't have to fight Patterson if I don't want to but I will give him a chance."

Ingo, reached at his Geneva apartment, said he "had full confidence the Boxing Commission will do the right thing."

He did not say what he thought the "right thing" was, and asked "You know what is, don't you?"

"When pressed for details Ingo said: 'I am sure the right thing will prevail.'"

Johansson quickly added he will ask his longtime adviser for advice when he returns to Göteborg tomorrow.

Johansson also confirmed that his relationship with Briget Landgren was a "good friends' basis."

He denied she was his fiancée and also denied that people he told "I have no intention of becoming a Swiss citizen."—UPI.

Russia's Torpedo Club Loses 2-1 To Wednesday

London, Nov. 23.

The Soviet football team Torpedo will return winless from England to Moscow after losing to English first division Sheffield Wednesday 2-1 before 35,000 spectators at Sheffield tonight. All goals were scored in the first half.

Torpedo lost 3-2 to Tottenham and tied 4-4 with Newcastle, two other English first division teams, in the previous two matches of its three-game English tour.

As against Newcastle, the Soviets began well against Sheffield Wednesday tonight, but could not keep up the pace before the powerful tackling of the English club. Star outside-right Metreveli, after some furious attacks, opened the score for Torpedo in the seventh minute. Shortly afterwards he kicked a 20-yard shot against the goalpost.

WINNING GOAL

Sheffield outside-left Finney equalised in the 24th minute on a 30-yard kick and five minutes later centre-forward Ellis headed to the eventual winning goal past Soviet international goalkeeper Yashin.

The English team dominated the second half and Yashin had to work hard to block the many good shots on his net.

Yashin, who with left-back Kuznetsov had been "borrowed" to reinforce Torpedo, thus yielded nine goals in the three matches.—AFP.

Joe Mercer Has A Three-Year-Plan For Aston Villa

By ARCHIE QUICK

London.

You can have your Blanchflowers and Mackays. The greatest post-war wing-half for my money was Joe Mercer, the bow-legged captain who uplifted Arsenal and England by example and precept.

He is now well on the way to becoming a great manager. He served his apprenticeship with Sheffield United and made a success of the job, and then courageously—as one would expect of him—accepted the challenge of restoring the past glories of Aston Villa.

Sitting back in his managerial chair after his team had whipped Charlton Athletic 11-1, he told me, without any show of bombast, "I am the first Villa manager who has had full control since the club's forgotten days. It had to be that way. I would not have come." Remember too that this man's love of football was sufficiently strong for him to sell a thriving wholesale grocer's business in Cheshire so that he could remain in the game.

Came Back

When he was carried out of the Arsenal Stadium with a broken leg which ended his active career, everybody thought that was his final curtain.

But Joe came back, and now he is leading the famous Claret and Blues back to the First Division at the first attempt. In his approach to his players there is much of the psychiatrist about him. Irish International left winger, Peter McParland for instance, was not playing well. Mr Mercer told him he was going to put him on the transfer list at £21,000. "I'm worth more than that," said the shocked player. "Not to me in your present form," replied Joe. McParland has not looked back since, and is the side's principal match winner.

Now Mr Mercer has just ticked his inside forward problem. Gerry Hitchens, Bobby Thomson and Ron Wylie had not scored in five, ten and eleven successive matches, amazing for a team at the head of affairs and with a 100% home record. Manager Mercer waved his Reserves at them, and what happened? Within an hour they had smashed in eight goals against hapless Charlton—five for Hitchens, two for Thomson and one for Wylie—to provide

Meanwhile it is also learnt that Budgie Patty, the former Wimbledon champion, is also in Hongkong, but despite request by the Hongkong Lawn Tennis Association has declined to take part in exhibition games against the American players.

SECOND TEST MATCH

Pakistan Need 108 Runs To Avert Innings Defeat

Lahore, Nov. 23.

Pakistan, with eight second innings wickets in hand, required 108 runs to avert an innings defeat at the close of the third day in their second Test match against Australia here today.

Pakistan, finishing with 138 for two, missed vital catches earlier, and Australia reached 391 for nine wickets before declaring during the lunch interval.

Pakistan, who have been fighting a rear-guard action since their first innings collapse for 140 on the opening day, locked Hanif Mohammad when they went in again. He is nursing a leg injury received in the first innings when he was struck by a ball from Ian Meekiff. It is not yet known if he will be able to bat.

Aggressive 54

Indias Ahmed, leading Pakistan for the first time, hit an aggressive 54, including seven boundaries, when his team began their second innings, and Saeed Ahmed is undefeated with 58, including eight fours.

But with two days remaining, Pakistan, who lost the first Test in the three-match series at Dacca last week, seem likely to lose a home series for the first time. Tomorrow is a rest day. Australia, resuming at 311 for six, sought quick runs but did not find it easy. Off-spinner Hassam Ahsan turned the ball considerably and dismissed Richie Benaud in the first over and might have polished off the innings quickly but for missed chances.

Alan Davidson, who had several "lives" hit a bright 47 before becoming one of Imtiaz Ahmed's five victims behind the stumps. Australia's Wally Groves also claimed five victims in Pakistan's first innings.

Best Attacker

Experts have predicted that the turf pitch will start to break up on Wednesday and there were signs of dust rising as Pakistan's second innings began. Left-arm spinner Lindsay Kline, showing great accuracy, looked the best of the Australia.

Death Of Horse That Money Could Not Buy

London, Nov. 23.

Foxhunter, the gelding which took Britain to the top of international show jumping and helped win a gold medal in the 1952 Olympics at Helsinki, died on Saturday at Abergavenny, Monmouthshire.

This was confirmed tonight by Lieutenant Colonel Harry Llewellyn, his owner. Colonel Llewellyn and Foxhunter were one of the most noted combinations in show jumping history. Foxhunter, who was retired from show jumping in September 1956, was 19. He has been described as "the greatest show jumper ever" and the "wonder horse of the show jumping arena." He won a record 78 international events.

Foxhunter was a horse that money could not buy. Colonel Llewellyn once refused an American offer of £12,000. At the time Colonel Llewellyn said: "Money could not buy him. You might as well ask how much I would want for a son."—China Mail Special.

HENRY LONGHURST ON GOLF

KILLED BY KINDNESS

Honolulu.

Golf certainly has become a world wide game. I have been up to the Oahu Country Club, the oldest golf club west of Chicago, to see the opening stage of the Hawaiian Open Championship and at least 75 per cent of the 90 entrants were Orientals. The Japanese, fired perhaps by their national success in the Canada Cup two years ago, seem to have gone mad on the game.

The driving range in the park here is crowded all day and people queue for a starting time on the public course well before daylight.

The clubhouse, incidentally, is named after my host, Francis Brown, a familiar figure each year at Glenaeles, where he is generally known as "Pineapple."

He was once amateur champion simultaneously of California, Hawaii and Japan and, at the age of 81, held the first nine at Pebble Beach in 29. This shook him so severely that he took four puts on the tenth green and came home in 41.

I cast my mind back to the Ryder Cup with mixed feelings. Without seeking to blame anyone in particular, I am satisfied that the team's preparation for the match included elementary mistakes which will be easily avoidable in future.

The Eldorado course, on which I played a number of rounds, slopes almost imperceptibly from the mountain end to the desert end and the greens are incredibly difficult to read—indeed I do not remember a course on which I have found it Longer Preparation?

In the end they had only six days in which to settle down and learn the course, and three of these were taken up with pre-amateur competitions. In the match itself I saw putt after putt hit perfectly well yet miss the hole through being on the wrong line.

I do not say that with a longer preparation the British team would have won: of course they wouldn't but I do think they would have made a stronger impression. At any rate I hope that when the Walker Cup team go to Seattle in 1961 they will fly straight over the Pole and have done with it.

Dai Rees, who made an admirable captain, would I think agree with these views, since his own fine recovery from six down only ended in failure through his putt for a 3 on the 35th green being hit on the wrong line.

Of the rest of the team, apart from the redoubtable fighter Eric Brown, who added a fourth successive win to his bag in the singles thus setting a record unsurpassed on either side, I should single out for special credit Norman Drew, Peter Alliss and David Thomas, each of whom came out with added stature. And now a mildly disagreeable topic. On one day there is no doubt that some of the club members got in the way of the British team's practice and, for all I know, the Americans too say they ought to have let them through. This was apparently made much of by some of the correspondents accompanying the team, who may not have been aware that their comments would be instantly cabled back to America.

These included references to the "dollar snob members of the Eldorado Club," "the tedious friendly games of the gaudily clad members," "the British Ryder Cup players are pangers in a millionaires' playground," and "the fabulous Eldorado course by imperious wealthy amateurs." Rees is quoted as saying "you can't move out there for aristocracy," Wynter as saying "the people here just don't want to know you."

Deeply Wounded

It is no business of mine what other observers write, but I can only report that when the Chicago newspaper in which all this was quoted reached Eldorado after the match the kind people who had done everything conceivable to make us welcome were deeply and bitterly wounded and I could not bring myself to blame them.

If the Ryder Cup is to be reduced to the same level of journalistic bickering as Test cricket, let us for heaven's sake give it up.

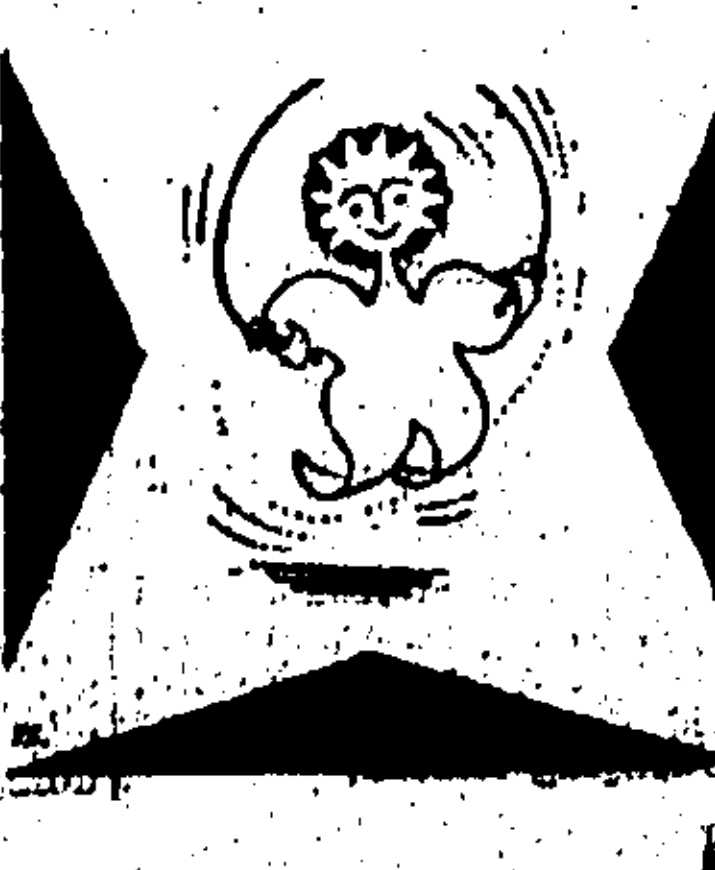

Now 30 gallons have just finished playing for the Canada Cup on 18 of the best holes selected from the Royal Melbourn Club's two courses—and here let us hope goodwill has prevailed for that in the only purpose for which so many have come so far.

THE MAN WHO SHOUTED WINS HIS APPEAL

An appeal by a Chinese who warned the occupants of a heroin den of a police raid, today was upheld in the Appeals Court by Mr Justice A. D. Scholes.

The Chinese, Yue Shun, aged 33, of Tai Kok-tsu, appealed against the severity of a 4-months' sentence imposed last month.

Shun was convicted for obstructing a police officer, in the execution of his duty by shouting, and warning and thereby allowing the occupants of the heroin den to escape.

Holding that the obstruction was only "mild," Mr Justice Scholes reduced the sentence to allow Shun's discharge today.

Ex-Club Manager Cross-Examined In Walsh Case

THE former manager of a gambling club was cross-examined at length about the financial affairs of the club in the Victoria District Court today.

He is Chan Ping-kwan, who was under questioning from Mr Patrick Yu.

Mr Yu is defending Sub-Inspector Francis Adrian Walsh, 30, and his wife, Irene Sheila, 20.

The couple, with Lily Lee, 40, have pleaded not guilty to conspiring to solicit payment from Chan and Chow Chun-kwong, as a reward for Walsh forbearing to take action against the Tat Kee Co. club, on 12th floor of Empire Apartments, in North Point.

Lee has denied a further charge of receiving $2,000 on August 16 as a reward for Walsh forbearing to carry out his duties in respect of the club's activities.

Chan told Mr Yu that the club, which folded up last September, had no accounts, no constitution, and was not registered.

He said members paid between $100 and $120 fees.

Chan disagreed with Mr Yu's suggestion that he was not telling the truth about the running of the club.

The hearing is continuing.

Mr Yu is assisted by Mr G. Liang, of M. K. Lam and Co., Mr Simon Li, Crown Counsel, is prosecuting.

YOUTH GOES FREE

Wong Ah-luk, 19-year-old factory worker, was found not guilty by a jury on a charge of manslaughter and discharged by Mr Justice W. A. Blair-Kerr at the Criminal Session this morning.

The Jury of five women and two men returned a majority verdict of five to two after deliberating for 15 minutes.

Wong was alleged by the Crown to have killed a fellow worker, Lai Kam-ming, following a fight in a factory in Tsau Wan on September 9.

The Crown alleged that during the fight the deceased fell on a machine plate and died shortly of confusion of the brain.

In his summing-up, Mr Justice Blair-Kerr described the definition of manslaughter, which he said was the unlawful killing of a person without any malice.

The crux of the case was whether the accused had caused the death of the deceased.

In manslaughter, the chain of causation must be complete and death must be related back directly to the act of an accused, his Lordship said.

FALSE TRADE NAMES ALLEGED IN ACTION

Central Magistrate Mr I. T. Morris today remanded to January 8, 1960, a Chinese businessman, charged with two counts of falsely applying trade names to articles.

Before the Central Court was Yong Cheng Yu, of the Nan Ho Trading Co., Ho Wing Lok St., Hongkong, who pleaded not guilty to both charges.

Mr F. W. Kendall, representative of the "Linguaphone" Co., alleged in a previous hearing that after searching the second floor premises of the Nan Ho Trading Co., on October 29 he had found two boxes with the trade name "Linguaphone" falsely applied.

He further alleged that he found 19 gramophone records with the name "Linguaphone" also falsely applied.

Appearances: — Mr Turnbull for the prosecution and Mr Donald Cheung for the defendant.

Appeal Pending Against Ship Judgment

The Full Court, comprising the Chief Justice, Sir Michael Horan, and the Senior Puisne Judge, Mr Justice J. R. Gregg, granted on application for a stay of execution of a judgment in the Soota against the vessel for arrears of wages and passage fare from Bangkok to Hongkong.

On November 3, Mr Justice Scholes awarded judgment to five former crew members of the Soota against the vessel for arrears of wages and passage fare from Bangkok to Hongkong.

The application for stay of execution was made by Mr R. W. S. Winter, representing the vessel, on the instruction of Mr Victor Lam, of Stewart and Co. The respondents, the five crew members, were represented by Mr S. Y. Giffen, on the instruction of Mr J. Davis, of Wilkinson and Crist.
